We strive to create workplaces where people from every background can thrive, providing all our associates equal access to information, development and opportunity. Our D&I journey began many years ago. We have built on the earlier work and invested significantly in developing a comprehensive, strategic approach. We have applied proven practices to make constant strides in the D&I journey. Some of the worth mentioning practices are as follows:

- Promoting inclusiveness and diversity within our workplace is one of the ways for us to foster an open-minded and create a global company culture. This helps our employees to better understand colleagues, clients, and customers around the world. It also makes our workplace a more interesting and personally enriching environment for everyone.
- We help communities prosper by supporting a broad range of initiatives for diverse communities through donations, community investments, sponsorships and employee volunteer activities.
- Our commitment to diversity and inclusion has spanned over the years, evolving from adhering to the basic tenets of compliance to diversity and full inclusion for all. We base our ongoing diversity and inclusion journey – whether related to our talent, the marketplace or our communities – on a solid foundation of respect for all individuals and the belief that we all benefit when everyone can bring their entire selves to work and contribute to their fullest potential. Having diversity is just one part of the story; how well that diversity works together is the key. We believe diversity is a fact and inclusion is a choice we make as individuals and leaders.

- With demographic changes, globalization and advances in technology, we know that diverse perspectives working together for a common purpose, have huge potential to drive innovation and growth for organizations and economies around the world. That's why we embrace both the business case and the ethical case for supporting diversity and inclusion.
- Indorama Ventures Employment Equity strategies are embedded in our diversity and inclusion efforts.

We constantly seek opportunities to calibrate our D&I processes by embracing array of diversity dimension in our diversity policy and diversity frame work.

Diversity Framework

In Indorama Ventures diversity is taken in many forms, from culture and nationality to gender, race, sexuality, educational background, and more. We have five strategies which we implement to promote diversity in workplace.

1. Commit to boosting our own cultural competency

- 1.1. Cross-cultural communication is an invaluable workplace skill. Today, more than ever, we interact professionally with people from different cultural background. Whether they're a team member, manager or a customer, developing a better understanding of different cultures and perspectives helps us to improve communication and avoid misunderstandings.
- 1.2. We make a point of educating ourselves - learn about different cultural traditions and approach to work, and keep up to date with global events within and outside the organization. We encourage our employees to take the time to get to know colleagues from different countries and backgrounds. Be open to travel opportunities, especially if they have the chance to visit an office or team overseas. Not only they gain a greater sense of cultural appreciation and sensitivity, they make new friends by finding much common ground.

2. Actively seek out new perspectives and ideas

- 2.1. For tackling a tough problem on the job, we suggest to ask for help and be open to new perspectives. People from different cultures and background take a different approach to business issues. Employees may find that their colleagues can offer valuable insight gained through a wealth of diverse life experiences. Looking at something in a new way may reveal a solution an individual would never have considered on his/her own.
- 2.2. Creating a workplace where different perspectives are valued and embraced can go a long way to foster productive business relationships. Whether we are in a junior role, a manager, or director, actively seeking advice, ideas, and expertise from our colleagues improves communication and foster a more inclusive company culture. This inclusive culture, in turn, helps the company to retain diverse talent and make the workplace an attractive option for globally minded job seekers.

3. Treat others how they want to be treated

- 3.1. We keep in mind the so-called Golden Rule to “treat others how you want to be treated” doesn’t always apply in a diverse professional environment. Instead, it is better to follow what has become known as the Platinum Rule: treat others how they want to be treated.
- 3.2. We are always considerate and sensitive to the boundaries and expectations of others. A request or activity one may be comfortable with could be in conflict with the values of someone else in our company. Even commonplace interactions could have subtle cultural nuances to take into account. For instance, understanding how different cultures perceive a handshake, maintaining eye contact or the boundaries of personal space helps to avert misunderstandings.
- 3.3. We suggest - when in doubt, ask. If someone accidentally causes offense, apologize. Both scenarios are valuable opportunities to improve our own cultural awareness, and our colleagues appreciate our sensitivity and effort. Being respectful of personal and cultural boundaries, and encouraging our colleagues to do the same through their example, make our workplace more welcoming and productive for everyone.

4. Observe diverse traditions, celebrations, and holidays from other cultures

- 4.1. Diversity and inclusion activities take many forms, but one of the easiest and most fun is creating a culturally diverse holiday calendar. Encourage your colleagues to get involved and find appropriate ways celebrate different traditions.
- 4.2. From Eid to Christmas, sharing food, music, and celebrations from around the world are wonderful celebrations for team-building and it is a great way for our colleagues at different levels of the organization to connect. However, when larger organized celebrations aren’t practical, we make a point to personally acknowledge a significant religious or cultural holiday. Well-wishes via email or over a coffee are a small gesture that means a lot to our colleague, especially if they are far from home.
- 4.3. Beyond major holidays, sensitivity to our colleagues’ regular cultural or religious practices is also important. For example, avoid scheduling client lunches during a time of fasting or holding meetings during a time of prayer.

5. Contribute to the cultural diversity of our own workplace

- 5.1. Whatever is the background, our unique perspective, culture, and experiences enrich the professional experience of those around us.

- 5.2. Our employees set an example for others to follow by positively contributing to our company culture. Something as small as sharing a traditional treat from home makes a wonderful way to spark a conversation and inspire others to share too.
- 5.3. The best way to promote diversity in our workplace is by embracing it and working to build an understanding. Getting to know our colleagues on a personal level, regardless of their culture and background that helps us to find common ground, deepens our appreciation of differences, and promotes an inclusive and welcoming work environment.

3. Measures to Remove Barriers for All Diversity Groups

Generally speaking, the most prevalent barriers to diversity and inclusion are lack of awareness or understanding of key issues and challenges, and the skill / knowledge required to foster inclusion. To overcome these barriers, we offer ongoing learning and developmental opportunities on topics ranging from: Understanding Unconscious Bias to the Invisible Minority. In addition to this, businesses units will soon have programs to ensure the effectiveness of people managers towards shaping a positive culture and strengthening employee diversity and engagement. The Company is much focused to enhance awareness and abilities of its employees to embrace inclusive behaviors. The initiatives which are planned to be rolled out are:

3.1. Addressing Unconscious Bias:

- The work of Dr. Mahzarin Banaji, a Harvard University professor of social ethics and co-author of "Blindspot: Hidden Biases of Good People", will be applied as self-assessment tool to understand and appreciate our unconscious bias.
- Diversity Moments is a series of web-based articles for employees to increase their understanding of diversity and inclusion. It will be expanded to increase awareness of unconscious biases. In addition, employees will be encouraged to take the Implicit Association Test (IAT) from Harvard University, a free, anonymous online tool that helps to identify blind spots for one group or concept over another.
- Gender Dynamics for Business Success will be a learning module that will provide key insights on stereotypical gender assumptions that can impact relationships and team dynamics as well as business performance.

3.2. Measures to Remove Barriers for Women

- One of the top priorities for us has been to focus on advancing women in leadership roles and building an inclusive talent pipeline. We continue to embed gender goals in our hiring and staffing initiatives, and we offer many career development opportunities and networking events for women employees. Our approach involves setting representation targets at both the enterprise and business levels.
- International Women’s Day Celebration: Over the past few years, International Women’s Day (IWD) has become a key date on Indorama Ventures diversity calendar. March 8 is not only a day for employees to reflect on and celebrate the achievements of women, but also an opportunity for Indorama Ventures to build momentum for its women’s agenda throughout the year, and to engage leaders, employees and community partners.

3.3. Leadership, Key Employee, and Talent Development Programs

- In 2016, we started programs at local and global scale, where groups of young talent, and manager level from different segments, cultures, nationalities, and gender are formed. 2021 initiatives and actions we do during the year in order to improve the diversity in the workplace.

- 1. WFH policy – We are moving towards in all units to work on WFH policy. We are introducing more flexible practice where the manager and the employees are starting to discuss the best way of working for both the company and themselves. The women and the mother can make a manager career even they have kids and this improve diversity.
- 2. Recruitment policy – we commit to provide a diverse pool of candidates all the time. It's an important thing is to make sure that every time we consider the candidate for hiring, that pool of candidate from diverse pool and it placed on the Recruitment policy that we are issuing it now globally. We are measuring the trend when we do a succession plan. For example, how many male or female are holding the important position, how many of the successors are female. The percentage is increasing over time for the last 2 years. It's a good opportunity for male and female to make their career. We gave a chance to those managers to see both male and female all the time they consider to hire. This information is available in public domain. All HR policies are published in intranet.
